Miller Wine Works' unusually styled 2003 Grenache Sage Canyon Vineyard exhibits herbal/minty characteristics intermixed with notions of sweet black cherries. I enjoyed its distinctive, singular style. Medium-bodied, with pure fruit, and a Pinot Noir-like sensitivity, it should provide pleasure over the next 2-3 years. The supple-textured, dark ruby/purple-colored, flowery, crème de cassis-scented and flavored 2003 Syrah Sage Canyon Vineyard possesses serious structure, concentration, and intensity. Relatively open and fleshy with a long, powerful finish, this impressive wine may be even better with a year or two of bottle age. It should last for a decade or more. Another gorgeous effort, the 2003 Syrah Castle Rock Vineyard offers up a serious nose of camphor, graphite, crème de cassis, licorice, and smoke. With terrific structure, full body, and beautiful intensity, it is a serious, almost primordial Syrah that is perfectly balanced, pure, and rich. Give it 1-2 years of cellaring and drink it over the following 10-12. Lastly, more monolithic and austere tannic, is the well-endowed, but difficult to penetrate 2003 Syrah Brookside Vineyard. Although it reveals tart acidity as well as a clipped finish, it possesses pure raspberry, black cherry, and black currant fruit, fine ripeness, medium body, and elevated tannin. It is hard to know where this wine is headed, but it will undoubtedly last for a decade or more. Tel. (707) 254-9727
